2022 UFSC Essay Topics:

“Money, Wealth and Disparities: Agony to Action, Creating Inclusive Access”

As people of color continue to seek social and racial justice in the wake of the nation’s most recent reckoning with the enduring vestiges of slavery, it is equally critical that we work to strengthen our communities financially, build wealth, and leave a legacy for generations yet unborn. How do we overcome the systemic and structural exclusion of Black people from economic opportunities in America?

“Future of Work in a Post-COVID Economy”

As the global pandemic COVID-19 continues to surge in America, revolutionize our lives, and permanently change the nature of work, what are the trends, patterns, and skills that will affect African Americans’ competitiveness in the new economy? How can the African American workforce better prepare itself to be competitive in a post-COVID economy?

“Critical Upgrade: African American Inclusion in the Financial Tech Sector!”

What is the current state of diversity in the financial tech sector of the financial services industry? How do we best address the inequities through public-private partnerships moving forward? What are the best practices / strategies that have been utilized in other sectors to achieve full representation of African Americans at every level of the financial tech sector of the financial services industry?

“The Black Tax: The Cost of Being Black in America!”

In his book, Shawn Rochester shows how The Black Tax (which is the financial cost of conscious and unconscious anti-black discrimination), creates a massive financial burden on African American households that dramatically reduces their ability to leave a substantial legacy for future generations. How can we leverage the best practices outlined in his book to overcome the enormous financial cost of current and past anti-black discrimination on African American households?

“Are You a Good Leader or a Great Virtual Leader?”

For years, the business environment has been trending towards a virtual environment, but the pandemic has accelerated the change to a new virtual environment. Now good leaders who have been effective in a face-to-face environment are being forced to take on the challenge of leading in a new virtual environment. What are the differences and similarities between leading in a virtual or in person environment? How do good leaders adjust to become great virtual leaders?
